

mems fest 11

Join us in Canterbury and online for the eleventh annual MEMS Festival at the University of Kent. We welcome papers on a range of topics within medieval and early modern studies for this interdisciplinary conference, including:

History, politics
Philosophy, theology
Literature, drama, performance culture, music
Latin and vernacular languages
Art history, architecture, archaeology
Manuscript studies, book history

We invite abstracts of up to 250 words for individual research papers of twenty minutes in length, or 700 words for a panel of three people presenting on a subject or theme. Please indicate which of the above themes best suits your paper.

All proposals should be emailed to memsfestival@gmail.com
by the 4th of April.
